Career start of teaching graduates from 2012

Newly qualified teachers are well integrated into the labour market and largely satisfied with their working conditions

Five years after graduation, over 95% of teaching graduates are employed, most of them as teachers. Graduates with a degree in preschool and primary level teaching are most often teaching at the level for which they were trained (97%) and are particularly satisfied with how their training matches their teaching activity (90%). These are some of the results of the graduate survey (EHA) conducted by the Federal Statistical Office (FSO).
