High uptake but great differences in cultural and leisure activities

Around 70% of the population visit museums and monuments and go to concerts and the cinema. However, there are differences in cultural access according to age, level of education and place of residence. Around two thirds of the population undertake creative activities, e.g. just under 20% sing. These and other results can be found in the new publication on cultural and leisure behaviour from the Federal Statistical Office (FSO).
