

New recipients of a retirement benefit from occupational pension funds, by combination of benefits and gender, 2017

Remarks:

Due to mathematical rounding, the percentages may not add up to 100% for each bar.

In addition to men and women, the total also includes persons whose gender is not specified.

This graph only includes pension funds. Among vested benefits institutions, only 2% of all newly paid retirement benefits are pensions, the remaining 98% are lump-sum payments. For this reason, no similar analysis is carried out for vested benefits institutions.

A person who receives several benefits of the same type in the same year is only listed once (e.g. two lump-sum payments from different pension funds).

This graph exclusively concerns data from a single year (2017). It cannot be seen whether a person has received an additional payment in the past or will receive such a payment in the future. However, in an occupational pension plan, it is only exceptionally possible that a lump-sum and new pension payment occur at different times.
